

The ZetaTalk Newsletter

Issue 283, Sunday March 4, 2012

Weekly news and views from around the world and beyond.

New ZetaTalk

Earth Changes

Announcements

Signs of the Times

The Zetas, and only the Zetas predicted the sinking on the Sunda Plate during the 7 of 10 plate movements. On October 16, 2010 they were very specific on what was going to happen to the lands lying on the Eurasian plate tongue lobbing down to hold SE Asia, better known as the Sunda Plate region. The Zetas estimated a 20 foot elevation loss along the South China coastline, 40 foot loss across Thailand to the Philippines, and an 80 foot loss for most of Sumatra, Java, and southern Borneo. Remember, this is land that will be affected by flooding with the anticipated elevation loss, not necessarily land that will become sea due to this loss. It may only become swampland, flooded without draining and needing seawalls to keep the tide from inundating it.

ZetaTalk Prediction 10/16/2010: If the loss of 40 feet in elevation is not devastating to the Philippines, it is to the coastline of southern Burma, Thailand, and Cambodia, which have vast areas that will suddenly and permanently be flooded. It is the southern tip of the tongue which is utterly devastated. Draw a line just north of the Malaysia border and over the top of Borneo. The land on the tongue from this point south will double its elevation loss, so that Java and the islands bordering the Banda Sea will find they have lost a full 80 feet in elevation, sinking many coastal cities and small islands out of sight. Singapore will be awash, its streets hopelessly inundated. Vast areas of the northern coastline of Sumatra and the southern coastline of Borneo will likewise be inundated.

Has this occurred? Except for Singapore, this degree of sinking is absolutely apparent on the MODIS satellite images, and on photos and videos taken by private individuals from airplanes. Compare the predicted sea level loss, made by the Zetas in late 2010, to what can be seen on the MODIS images today. When compared to MODIS a year or more ago, one can clearly see the flooding that has arrived, and remained! The red regions on the maps are showing areas that would be affected if the predicted elevation loss were to occur.

IMAGE: Borneo

IMAGE: SE Sumatra

IMAGE: North Java Coastline

IMAGE: Bangkok

IMAGE: Cambodia

IMAGE: Viet Nam

Jakarta in particular has recently sustained more sinking. A recent video from a plane leaving Jakarta airport confirms the degree of flooding to the west of the airport, and along the coastline to the west. Photos available on flicker also confirm this. Notice the degree of flooding inland! They use sea walls and pump out the residential areas extensively. But still North Jakarta has been confirmed by the government to be 70% below sea level for some months now.

IMAGE: Jakarta West

The peninsula just to the east of Jakarta also shows the extensive sinking. This peninsula has a drainage canal running parallel to a snaking river. Further to the east is another peninsula also showing extensive flooding. This is not due to rainfall when the entire coastline has become inundated and the inundated land is open to the sea and they are clearly at the same elevation, the same level. This is sinking!

IMAGE: Jakarta Canal

IMAGE: Jakarta East

Sakurajima Erupts

This Japanese volcano is on a southern island, very much affected by the 7 of 10 plate movements ongoing. As noted in this Pole Shift ning blog, Sakurajima's eruption history took a sharp increase since 2010.

IMAGE: Sakurajima Eruption

Japan: Sakurajima Volcano Erupts Spewing Lava and Ash

February 19, 2012

<http://theintelhub.com/2012/02/19/japan-sakurajima-volcano-erupts-spewing-lava-and-ash/>

Sakurajima volcano in southern Japan erupted Sunday with a few violent burps of gas and lava. Massive bursts of light shined through the ash cloud as the eruption took place.

Note the location. As the Philippine Plate tilts and folds, it subducts sharply under the south islands of Japan. At Sakurajima's precise location there is also a fracturing of the great Eurasian Plate. Sakurajima's eruption comes just after a period where heaping water east of the Mariana Trench was evident, as shown by buoy 52402 in Issue 282 of this newsletter just last week. The Mariana and Philippine plates are tilting and folding, and this likewise affects Sakurajima's location. Per the Zetas the Philippine Plate normally applies less pressure to Japan than the Pacific Plate to the north, so this is clearly due to movement in the Philippine Plate.

IMAGE: Sakurajima Location

ZetaTalk Comment 10/15/2011: The South Island is attached to the very stable Eurasian Plate, and as can be seen from a map of active volcanoes, has almost no volcanic activity when compared to the highly active volcanoes throughout the North Island. Pressure on the South Island is relieved at the border with the Philippine Plate, which tilts to relieve the pressure and does not push under the Eurasian Plate to the extent that subduction under the North Island occurs.

Agulhas Whirlpool

In the Safe Locations documentation on S Africa the Zetas warn that tides and waves off the tip of S Africa will be fearsome during the hour of the Pole Shift. Water will rush from the Indian Ocean to the South Atlantic, and back again.

ZetaTalk Prediction 1995: South Africa's largest problem will be during the shift itself, as it lies between the Atlantic and Indian Ocean. During India's subduction, an actual suction will occur there, drawing water. When the Atlantic widens, a similar situation will occur. During the week when rotation stops, the waters of the earth will drift toward the poles, so during the shift will have a tendency to rush to fill the gaps in the Atlantic and Indian Oceans. Water on the move is unpredictable and forceful, and South Africa will stick out into this maelstrom unprotected. Those wanting to survive the shift should move well inland and return only after water sloshing has stopped, a period of several days, to be safe.

The Agulhas Current, rushing past Cape Agulhas on the tip of S Africa, is considered the strongest in the world.

Cape Agulhas

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cape\_Agulhas

It is the geographic southern tip of Africa and the official dividing point between the Atlantic and Indian Oceans.

Agulhas Current

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Agulhas\_Current

It flows down the east coast of Africa from 27°S to 40°S. It is narrow, swift and strong.

Now a monstrous whirlpool has been discovered in the current, by all accounts stumping scientists who cannot figure out why this has occurred. The whirlpool is 90 miles wide, and visible from satellites.

IMAGE: Agulhas Whirlpool

An Unusually Strong Whirlpool Emerged near the Coast of South Africa

February 21, 2012

<http://hainanwel.com/en/unusual-world/1546-whirlpool-south-africa.html>

The width of the whirlpool is 170 kilometers and it is located a few hundred meters below of the water surface. Scientists can not explain the reason for pumping water from the Indian Ocean to the southern of Atlantic Ocean, which led to the emergence of this whirlpool.

Satellite Captures Enormous 90-Mile-Wide Storm that's Underwater

February 21, 2012

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/sciencetech/article-2104279/>

A NASA satellite has provided jaw-dropping pictures of a huge 'storm' brewing under the sea. The swirling mass of water - which measures a whopping 93 miles wide - has been spotted off the coast of South Africa by the Terra satellite on December 26. This counter-clockwise eddy is thought to have peeled off from the Agulhas Current, which flows along the southeastern coast of Africa and around the tip of South Africa.

The Earth wobble, the Figure 8 that occurs daily due to the N Pole of Earth being pushed away by the N Pole of the approaching Planet X, has created a similar situation for the tip of S Africa to that presented by the Zetas for the hour of the shift. Per the Zetas, it is the Earth wobble pumping water from the Indian Ocean to the South Atlantic, and back again.

ZetaTalk Explanation 2/25/2012: The Figure 8 of the Earth wobble is causes the most extreme movements during the circular swings at the poles of the Earth, and this certainly includes the region of S Africa. First the globe is forced such that S Africa swings to the East, and then as the Figure 8 loop completes, to the West. What this does is produce a pumping action, first increasing water pressure along the east coast, and then reversing this to produce excess water pressure along the west coast. When strong enough, this could literally change the direction of the Agulhas Current, but this point has not yet been reached.

The Agulhas Current normally flows from the Indian Ocean, which has relatively warmer water, to the South Atlantic. When the water pressure in the Indian Ocean is increased by the wobble, this of course increases the pressure of the flow, which would increase in force and speed. None of this in and of itself would produce a whirlpool, however. It is the reverse wobble effect, when S Africa swings to push under the South Atlantic, that produces the whirlpool. When this happens, there is a clash in the currents, and the Coriolis Effect as with all water and air in motion on Earth clicks in and creates a whirlpool. The Earth wobble, and only the Earth wobble can explain the Agulhas whirlpool.

Evidence of Aliens

A Zeta face has been discovered on an Egyptian tomb wall, and a suspected mummified "Zeta" among the human royalty, per a Pole Shift ning blog. The "Zeta" has a distended belly and is more likely a hydrocephalus, surgery attempted to correct the problem. And all this time kept from the public eye by Egyptian officials who were cooperating with the cover-up over the alien presence, presumably.

IMAGE: Egyptian Aliens

ET Mummy Found In Egypt

February 23, 2012

<http://www.pakalertpress.com/2012/02/23/et-mummy-found-in-egypt/>

Buried in a dark corner of the Cairo Museum is a mummy that could change the world and our view of humanity's place in the universe. Entombed thousands of years ago with the body of a Pharaoh, the small, frail-looking creature is easily recognizable to any present day UFO investigator: the body of an alien, mummified Grey. Famous Egyptologists like the now deposed Antiquities Minister, Zahi Hawass, found bizarre artifacts and disturbing tomb paintings and clamped down on the embarrassing finds with a tight lid of security. Any leaks that emerged concerning the discoveries were met with denials, derision, and sometimes veiled threats.

Then there is a new $20 Canadian coin, released in 2011! As noted on this YouTube video, there is an American Indian in a canoe, and his reflection seems to be an odd looking bald child! Per the Zetas, someone in authority in the coin department is hinting broadly that Canada would be a good home for the Hybrids in the Aftertime. On close inspection, the Hybrid can also be seen as a child, looking directly down into the water, hair slicked back tightly along the head. But the discussion, and the first take that this is an alien or Hybrid face, was viral on the Internet.

IMAGE: Canadian Coin

ZetaTalk Comment 2/25/2012: Why would a Canadian coin include a small creature with what appears to be a deformed human face, the eyes too large for a human child and hairless? The coin is showing this at first glance as the reflection, when assuming the lettering to be in the upright position. But upon closer examination, the American Indian is the reflection, implying that Canada "reflects" its American Indian heritage. Is the apparent child just a sloppy carving? The American Indian is precise, negating that excuse. This is intended to be a depiction of a hybrid, hairless and with large eyes but the implication, the next residents of Canada! Or so Canada hopes, as the high tech cities of the hybrids are much desired.

And more evidence of aliens on the Moon, in the past, courtesy of the Chinese government's Chang'e-2 moon orbiter. Per the Zetas, China will not participate in the cover-up over the alien presence. They won't make pronouncements, but they won't kill the evidence either.

IMAGE: Moon Base

Alien Moon Base Captured By Chang'e-2 Orbiter Video

February 20, 2012

<http://scottcwaring.blogspot.com/2012/02/alien-moon-base-captured-by-change-2.html>

I was sent some pictures by a source who claims China will be releasing Hi Res images taken by the Chang'e-2 moon orbiter, which clearly show buildings and structures on the moons surface. He also claims NASA has deliberately bombed important areas of the Moon in an effort to destroy ancient artefacts and facility's. Pictures yet to be released clearly show nuclear impact craters and building debris caused by explosions in an effort by NASA to destroy the truth. China is moving toward full disclosure of the Extraterrestrial reality, if these images and future ones are verified genuine then NASA should be investigated for fraud and treason. China will be releasing all the data and images from the Chang'e-2 in the coming weeks and months, lets hope this is the beginning of a new era.

ZetaTalk Comment 2/25/2012: As we have frequently mentioned, the US is the country with the most to lose during disclosure. They have since the days of Roswell been at the helm of the cover-up. They have dead alien bodies and space ship junk to display, and thus could dispel the cover-up with a single press conference, but delay because so many giant egos would have to explain that they lied these many years. Now comes China, with their own satellites and their own Moon orbiter. China has constructed ghost cities openly, showing that they take the ZetaTalk message seriously enough to construct cities for their elite to occupy after the Pole Shift. Where they are not making a public statement on the reason for these ghost cities, they allow the world to come to its own conclusion. Their attitude about alien artifacts will be similar. No cover-up. No admission, but no cover-up.

USGS Disclaimers

The USGS is in a pinch. Faced with increasing earthquakes, it was first ordered to under-report the magnitude and frequency, and then ordered to take command of all earthquake reporting worldwide to give the appearance of a united front during this subterfuge. As reported in Issue 2 of this newsletter on January 24, 2006, they were no longer free to simply report their findings. They had to pass all this past the Bush administration. Apparently, earthquakes had become a national security issue.

Scientists Worried about Bush Clampdown at Publication
December 14, 2006
<http://www.commondreams.org/headlines06/1214-01.htm>

The US administration is clamping down on scientists at the US Geological Survey. New rules require screening of all facts and interpretations by agency scientists. The rules apply to all scientific papers and other public documents, even minor reports or prepared talks, documents show. The changes amount to an overhaul of commonly accepted procedures for all scientists, not just those in government, based on anonymous peer reviews. In that process, scientists critique each other's findings to determine whether they deserve to be published. From now on, USGS supervisors will demand to see the comments of outside peer reviewers' as well any exchanges between the scientists who are seeking to publish their findings and the reviewers.

At that time, there seemed to be a delay in reporting. All sites had to wait until the USGS decided what they wanted to do with a quake - drop, reduce, or allow. But during the December 26, 2004 great Sumatra quake of a magnitude 9.5, there was disagreement on what magnitude applied. The USGS insisted the quake was a magnitude 8.9 or lower and finally allowed the magnitude to creep up to 9.2, while local geologists called it a magnitude 9.5. This rule that a quake had to be just below a statistically significant higher magnitude, a 5.9 instead of a magnitude 6.0 for instance, was detailed in Issue 245 of this newsletter on June 12, 2011. In this way statistics generated for magnitude 6 and above would not include the 5.9

quakes, and would appear to be less. Now yet another skew in reporting has taken place, as pointed out in a Pole Shift ningblog. The USGS was forcing EMSC to be in step on quake reporting, but in 2009 seemed to separate. In addition, the USGS is now deferring to NEIC, another quake collector. Anything, it seems, to blur the fact that quakes are not being reported accurate. The USGS has thrown up their hands and run off to hide!

IMAGE: USGS/EMSC Split

ANSS/NEIC Combined Earthquake List
<http://earthquake.usgs.gov/research/data/>

We maintain a catalog of earthquakes that merges the catalogs of the NEIC with those of the US Advanced National Seismic System (ANSS) regional networks.

Latest Earthquakes M5.0+ in the World - Past 7 days
http://earthquake.usgs.gov/earthquakes/recenteqsww/Quakes/quakes\_big.php

The maps and lists show events which have been located by the USGS and contributing agencies within the last 7 days. They should not be considered to be complete lists of all events M2.5+ in the US and adjacent areas and especially should not be considered to be complete lists of all events M4.5+ in the world. Beginning January 1, 2009, earthquakes outside the US below M4.5 are not reported unless NEIC obtains felt reports. The World Data Center for Seismology, Denver (a part of the USGS National Earthquake Information Center) continues to receive data from observatories throughout the world for several months after the events occurred, and using those data, adds new events and revises existing events in later publications.